For the Alexandria Daily Adverser,

UNMOVED by party rage, unfluenced by any other interest but a zeal fothis our common country, I shall endeavor this essay to shew the utility of commercand the necessity of a navy. Nature seen to have formed the United States for a comercial nation. The fertility and felicity oher soil, her vast inlets and numerous bays id estuaries are sufficient indications that as future day the United States must becom the first maritime power of the earth. In issession of every advantage which is necessary to constitute us a trading people, we ount not to neglect the means of extending our lyigation and enriching our country: when w consider agriculture and commerce so happil blended and united, surely the advocates of ariculture must, by a parity of reasoning, adnt the utility and necessity of commerce. W certainly know that agriculture and commirce flourish and grow in the same soil, ad spring from the same prolific parent. Apiculture and commerce are the breasts from hich the commonwealth must draw its noulshment; they are the pillars on which we just erect our independency and liberties. Shall we crush our commerce in its infant bul, and not suffer it to shoot out into all thosevigorous plants and branches, which will ineviably tend to support our rising fabric, and form one of those solid stocks, upon which we nust graft the ease and felicity of the people. Into its innumerable ducts and channels, the granary of agriculture is emptied, which, by the inestimable officacy of commerce, is conducted to the remotest limits of the globe. Ceres, with her golden she ves, welcomes her fair handmaid with her cornucopia, replete with all the luxuries, elegancies and conveniencies of life. Were it not for commerce, agriculture would no longer yield luxuriance and plenty, but her fields, lately crowded with the rich and exuberaat gifts of bountiful providence, would then present naught but one continued range of sterility and weeds. Industry and labor, those great supports of moral economy, and the very tie of virtuous liberty, would then no longer prove the source of individual wealth and national grandeur. By a happy issue of things, and by the bold and ennobling judgment of our forefathers, who rescued our liberties from the demon of tyranny, by that judgment which has elevated us to a level with European nations, we have formed a social ompact. which, unless impaired by innovation, by popular delusion, or too fond a predeliction for particular systems, bids fair to form the United States a power efficient to preserve a balanse in the affairs of nations. and by degrees to gain a glorious, an honoracause of freedom, we have vindicated the independence of America, and have, from the convulston of times which tried mens' souls, established a government, which, if properly administered, will assure to the people the greatest political renown and happiness, cer- ing worked with that labor and ease, which tainly the commercial weight, which occupies a chief place in the political scale, would incline us to nourish and support it as the vital principle, the life blood of the American government. If to avoid the shipwreck of union, we must adbere to certain fixed and stable maxims, surely this maxim, (which needs Linibriety. That man who admires agricultunot the aid of enlightened philosophy) " that commerce is the grand ligament which must bind the Atlantic to the back states," presents itself to every mind, free from the shackles of prejudice. The nations of Europe, viewing with no regardless eye the solid grandeur of our exalted republic, would at any time permit us to rifle the temple of commerce, and with a sacriligious hand to prostrate that noble pillar, which upholds the monument of American liberty, the proud, elevated principle of union. What has formed the bitter contentions between England and this country, but the carrying trade, and is not this a strong proof of the political importance of commerce. Why has she thrust into the maritime code interpolations, and why has she and France so tenaciously and perseveringly restricted neutral navigation? But for this plain reason, to clip the wings of our all towering commerce, lest she should soar to a dangerous height. Its utility and protection must be obvious to every patriot, every lover of his country.-Even the agriculturist, who beholds not with envy and jealousy the honest merchant reaping his harvest of wealth from the fruitful and happy field of commerce, must confess, that agriculture and commerce are united by the same bonds of union, the same ties of individual and national consequence. Commerce unfurls her rich flag in every sea, and agricul- For the defence of our liberties, rkvenues and these three great national objects, enable the ture, confident of her sisters triendship and affection, willingly confides to her the fruits vy, which has supported Great-Britain in all become the arbiter of Europe, in this western of her long earned labor. It is the carrying mit that it is; but has commerce been ever trade which will exalt our country to the sum- known to ingulph the liberties of a nation, mit of wealth and glory. If we wish to preserve union, if we wish to see Europe supplied from the granary of America, if finally we wish to see the agriculturalist and merchant united by the same ties of interest and welfare, we can never think of discharge itself with tenfold fury on our derefusing to commerce all our aid, all our protection; if we wish to behold our country flourishing, and taxes collected from imperceptible consumption, surely the people will view commerce as the distinguished centre of their greatness, as the only solid safeguard of their union and independence. They will let your endaunted union and magnanimity endeavor to fortify and preserve their commercial rights, by every bulwark they are capuble of receiving. For I am convinced when having a passive commerce? that undernet we renounce our navigation we surrender our character and enterprize of Americans, which independence. To guard and preserve the in themselves, are an inexhaustable mine of interests of commerce, and to gain respect wealth to the nation would languish and de add esteem from the nations of Europe, we and poverty and disgrace would inevitably sucmust establish such a navy, which, if not ca- ceed to that wealth and greatness, which if pable of coping with the maratime powers, properly conducted would have secured us the will at all events enable us to retain our liber. eavy and admiration of the civilized globeties pure and unsullied, free from the control A navy, commerce, and agriculture, are my of foreign influence. Yesterday morning we were informed hat a ship was in Hampton Roads from London in consequence of which we dis parched a boat down, and had the satisfac. con to find that the ship Powhatan, capt Coule, was in the roads in 47 days from andon, by her we have received files of onden papers to the fifth of Dee. whose ontents are of the first importance.

We have confined our extracts for this aper principally to the official documents clative to war, and commerce. War beween Russia and Great Britain, has been ficially announced, and it may possibly be ollowed by every continental power, not excepting Austria, and even Sweden. At e same time the continent is in a very a. stated state, from the new and extraordi. bry decrees and orders of the great belli

Although we have delayed the publica. ion of our paper, we are only enabled to present a part of the various orders of council of the British government, modiying, explaining, and abating the rigor of he order of the 11th November, publishid in this day's paper, all these will be gi. ven in our next.

We have had only time to give a very hasty perusal to our papers, from which we notice that the face of Portugal is yet un. depided, but from an article in the Paris Moniteur, we conclude that Portugal has alleo under the displeasure of France, for permitting the English property to leave that country. Spain is in the most distract. ed state, the late conspiracy is supposed to be nothing more than a contrivance to give few densaty to that country.

The Russian fleet, or rather a part of it, ofter leaving Gibraltar put into the Tagus, more it is believed from accident than degn, and ewing to tempestuous weather. Three of the Russian ships parted from those that went into the Tagos, and had not been heard of after the gale.

WAR WITH RUSSIA. The ascendancy of French politics at the fourt of St. Petersburg is at length complete, as appears from the following official commusication published yesterday addressed to the

" Stanliope Street, Dee. 2. Mr Lonn,

I have the honour to inform your ing received from his majesty's ambassadou at the court of St. Petersburgh, by which it appears, that the emperor of Russia having published a declaration, in which his imperia majesty declares his intention to break off all communication with England; to recall his minister from this court, and not to permit the continuance of a British mission at the court of St. Petersburgh, his majesty's ambassador has demanded his passport, and is now on his way home. I have lost no time in communicating this intelligence to your lordship, in order that it may be made as public as possible without delay.

" I have the honor to be, &c. (Signed)

" GEO. CANNING. " To the right hon, the lord Mayor."

The above information was furnished by sir Robert Wilson, who arrived in town at an early hour yesterday morning from St. Petersburgh-Mr. Canning, lord Mulgrave, and several other ministers were immediately sent for, and remained in consultation during several hours; after which messengers were sent off from the admiralty to all the principal sea

The dispatches from St. Petersburgh were sent from that place on the morning of the 9th ult. at which time no embargo had been laid on the British shipping in the ports of Russia: It appears that about twenty sail of British vessels remained at Cronstadt, most of which were leaded on ahe 31st October .-There were 52 British ships at Riga; and on the 23d, the river at Archangel was frozen over and no British vessels remained there.

December 4. IMPORTANT STATE PAPER.

Declaration of Russia against England.

The higher the value in which the emperor held the amity of his Britannic majesty, the keener the regret he mus feel at the complete alienation of that monarch.

Twice has the emperor taken up arms in a cause in which the interests of Britain were most immediately concerned; but he has solicited to no purpose her co-operation to produce the accomplishment of her own objects. He did not require she should unite her forces with his, he was anxious only she should make a diversion in their favor—Hejwas astonished that in the furtherance of her own cause she herself would make no exertion-On the contrary, she looked on a cold spectatrix of the herself kindled, and sent a part of her troops to attack Buenos Ayres. Another portion of her army which seemed destined to make a diversion in Italy finally withdrew from Sicily where it was assembled. Hopes were entertained that they had taken this step, in order to throw themselves on the Neapolitan coast, but it was soon understood, that they were employed in taking possession of Egypt.

But what sensibly hurt the feelings of his imperial majesty was, to see that in violation of the faith and express stipulations of treaties, England annoying the maritime trade of his subjects; and at what period was this proceeding adopted? when the blood of the Russians was flowing in the glorious battles which accumulated and directed against the armies of his Imperial majesty, the whole of the military force of his majesty the emperor of the French, with whom England was, and still is, at war!

When the two emperor's made peace, his majesty, notwithstanding his just causes of displeasure at the conduct of England, did not however refrain from endeavoring to render her services. The emperor stipulated in that very treaty that he should interpose his mediation between England & France; and he accordingly made an offer of that mediation to the king of Great Britain, apprising him that it was with a wish to obtain honorable conditions for him. But the British ministry, adhering no doubt to the plan that was to dissolve and break off the ties between Russia and England, rejected that mediation.

The peace between Russia and France was likely to bring about a general peace, but it was at this moment that England suddenly awoke from that apparent lethargy in which ber, 1807. she had slumbered; but it was only to throw into the north fresh fire-brands, which were to rekindle, and have actually kindled, the flames of war which she was not desirous to see extinguished.

Her fleets, her troops appeared on the Danish coast, to execute an act of violence of which history, so fruitful in example, records no parallel.

their ports; that Mr. A. had renewed his moderate conduct, and for a long and unexpected course of wise neutrality, and who kind of moral dignity, finds itself treated as if it was engaged in secret plots, and was the whole of these imputations were only meant to justify the sudden and entire spoliation of that power. The emperor, wounded in his dignity, wounded in the affection he feels for his people, wounded in his engagements with the courts of the north, by this act of violence committed in the Baltic, a close sea, the tran- make Sale, it will therefore be quility of which has so long depended on sold a great Bargain if applicatithe court of St. James, and is reciprocally that disputches have been this morn-guaranteed by both powers, did not dissemble is resentment against England, and warned or that he should not remain indifferent to sch a proceeding.

His majesty did not foresee, that while hgland, having successfully employed her fces, was on the point of seizing on her jey, she would offer a fresh outrage to Denark, in which his majesty was to bear a

New propositions, still more insidious than tose made at first, were made to Denmark, wich aimed at binding down to England that pwer thus subjugated, degraded, and ap puding, as it were, every thing that had ppened.

Still less did the emperor foresee that it huld be proposed to him to guarantee that obmission and to promise that that act of plence should not be attended with any misevous consequences to England.

The English ambassador seems to have lagined that he might venture to propose to e minister of the emperor, that his imperial rajesty should undertake the apology and deface of a proceeding which he had so openly endemned. To this step on the part of the chinet of St. James, his majesty has though poper to pay only that attention which it served, and has deemed it high time to t limits to his moderation.

The prince royal of Denmark endowed ith a character full of nobleness and energy, ald having been blessed by Providence with a sul as elevated as his high rank, had apprized the emperor, that, justly enraged at what had recently happened against Copenhagen, he had not ratified the convention respecting it, and that he considered it as null and void.

That prince has just now acquainted his majesty with the new propositions that have been made to him, and which are of a nature rather to provoke his resistance than to appease his resentment, for they tend to stamp on his actions the seal of degradation, the impression of which they never will exhibit.

The emperor struck with the confidence which the prince royal placed in him, having moreover considered his own grounds of dissatisfaction with England, having attended to his engagements with the powers of the north engagements entered into by the empress Catherine and his late imperial majesty both of glorious memory has resolved upon fulfilling

His imperial majesty breaks off all communication with England: he recalls his embassy from that court, and will not allow any sanguinary theatre of the war which she had ambassador from her to continue at his court. There shall henceforward exist no relations between the two countries.

The emperor declares that he abrogates every act hitherto concluded between G. Britain and Russia, and particularly the convention concluded in 1801. He proclaims anew the principles of the armed neutrality, that monument of the wisdom of the empress Catherine and binds himself never to recede from that system.

He calls upon England to give complete satisfaction to his subjects, with respect to all the just claims they may set up, of ships and merchandise seized and detained, contrary to the express tenor of the treaties concluded during his own reign.

The emperour gives warning, that nothing shall be re-established between Russia and England, until the latter shall have given satisfa ction to Denmark.

The emperor expects, that his Britannic majesty, instead of permitting his ministers to scatter fresh seeds of war, in compliance only with his own feelings, will be induced to conclude a peace with his majesty the emperor of the French, which would be extending, in a manner to the whole world, the inestimable blessings of peace.

When the emperor shall be satisfied upon all these points, and especially upon that of a peace between France and England, without which no part of Europe can expect to enjoy any real tranquility, his Imperial majesty will then willingly return to the relations of amity with Great Britain, which in the just resentment which the emperor should feel, he has maintained, perhaps too long.
